TO THE PEOPLE OF PENNSYLVANIA:

The celebration of the Fourth of July, 1866, is one of Great importance to you, and it is becoming at this period to give a succinct account of the reasons which have caused the Governor of your State to take so much interest in the proceedings.

On the Fourth day of March, 1861, Abraham Lincoln was inaugurated as the Sixteenth President of the United States of America. From long scenes of disgrace and robbery the Country seemed to have thrown off its apathy, and determined to use its best endeavors to secure Government from its despoilers, and those who desired to subvert its blessings, to perpetuate their own odious institutions. It would be needless to recur to the damning schemes laid out by those who having lost power, were anxious to assassinate the man whom God had given a nation to be its Saviour and Redeemer. History will do justice to these deep laid schemes, and we will bring ourselves to the meeting of the Governors of loyal states in Washington, on April 4th, 1861, so beautifully portrayed in the following article from the pen of Chas. C. Wilson, Esq., then of the Philadelphia Daily News, but now attached to Forneys' Press.

WORDS RIGHTLY SPOKEN AT A MOMENTOUS TIME.

Shortly after Abraham Lincoln assumed the duties of President of the United States, while traitors infested the National Capital, and the gloom of rebellion was fast thickening over the face of the country, he was visited by several Governors of as many States, among whom was the Chosen Son of Pennsylvania, Andrew G. Curtin. The President was contemplating how to act. He seemed to be self-willed, and had the nerve, but something like a doubt lingered in his mind, he paced the floor in a meditative mood some time, and said but little. There was a solemnity in the crowd of intelligent men, and statesmen around him, that indicated deep thoughtful contemplation. Each of the limited party present had already expressed his views upon the importance of the occasion.

The whole machinery of the Government was in bad order, and in the several departments there were traitors still clogging the wheels. An unbidden tear started down the cheek of the patriot President, but he nerved himself for the work before him. The Temple of Liberty was tottering indeed ; column after column was falling. His mission was the arduous one of rebuilding it. The President seated himself in a chair once adorned by Washington, the Father of his Country, when all at once he sprang to his feet, and exclaimed "Gentlemen, the Union and the Constitution must be saved. I have been contemplating whether the States will respond to my proclamation, if I issue it now, Governor Curtin, what will Pennsylvania do?" Governor Curtin who was standing looking out of a window, turned and confronted the President and replied, "What will Pennsylvania do?" Why Sir, She'll furnish a hundred thousand men in a week, if it be necessary."

This noble and prompt reply of the favored son of the blue mountains of the Keystone State clinched the nail. They were the right words spoken at a momentous time. The eye of the Springfield Statesman grew brighter, his tall manly form stood more erect, and shaking hands with the Governor, said "Those words encourage me, they take all doubt from my mind, they ease my heart of a heavy weight, my proclamation I shall issue to morrow." Joy beamed as brightly in the congregation of intelligent men, as the sun ever did, after a gloomy day. The proclamation was issued, and when the unseen electric spark spread the announcement to all parts of the country, a couple of companies from the interior of the State of Pennsylvania, responded, and forthwith they arrived at the capital of the Nation. Pennsylvania was first in the field, almost before the ink was dry in the proclamation; and the glorious old state has now more men, good, solid, noble, true hearted patriotic men in the American Army than any other state in the Union, and has a few more of the same sort left. But for the reply of Gov. Curtin, or had he hesitated for a single moment, the issuing of the proclamation would have been delayed at a time when weeks were months, and months were years.

Pennsylvania had her hundred thousand men ready by the time the National Government wanted them, and thus the words of our own active, patriotic, and prophetic Governor, have been well fulfilled to the very letter. He may be truly considered the "hero of the war."

Impartial history will give praise to Governor Curtin. His name will be as familiar as household words among all patriotic Union-loving people, long after the names of the few miserable wretches, who are so steeped in prejudice, and so lost to all feelings of virtue, respect, and manliness as to calumniate him, shall have rotted with their carcasses in the grave of deep and blank oblivion.

His name is a tower of strength, and will increase in power as time progresses. Selfishness is not in his vocabulary. He stands this day in the wild sea of public opinion, like a proud defiant rock in mid ocean, around and against which the waves are expected to surge, but to go back into calm water again, without doing any harm. His noble reply to President Lincoln, when men of iron nerve were wanted, it is a stamp of the true character of the man. It was the musical ring of the true metal, the joyous tone of victory at the beginning, and it will be the death-knell of thieving usurpation and foul rebellion.—Philadelphia Daily News, November 7th, 1861.

On April 6th, 1861, Governor Curtin returned to Harrisburg, Pa., and the Legislature being then in Session, he issued a message to the Senate and House of Representative—on April 9th, 1861, couched in the following term "Pennsylvania yields to no State in her respect for, and her willingness to protect, by all needful guarantees, the constitutional rights, and constitutional independence of her sister states, nor infidelity to that constitutional union, whose unexampled benefits have been showered alike upon herself, and them," after explaining to the Legislature the expediency of arming the Militia, in order to meet the demands of the General Government, he concluded by saying "Pennsylvania offers no counsel, and takes no action in the nature of a menace. Her desire is for peace, and her object the preservation of the personal and political rights of citizens, of the true sovereignty of States, and the Supremacy of law and order animated by these sentiments and indulging an earnest hope of the speedy restoration of those harmonious and friendly relations between the members of this Confederacy, which have brought our beloved country to a condition of unequalled Power and prosperity, I commit the grave subject of this communication to your deliberation.

The Legislature referred the communication to a special committee, and expectations were greatly disappointed when on the 12th day of April, 1861, the news came to Philadelphia, that Fort Sumpter which commanded the harbour of Charleston, S. C., had been bombarded on the 11th, and the noble garrison under command of the gallant Major Anderson, could not hold out much longer. Timid hearts and evil spirits cautioned the true and loyal to desist from retaliation, and allow the traitors time to ponder and repent, but when on Saturday morning, the 13th day of April, 1861, the news came that the traitors were still firing upon the almost defenceless fort, then the nations heart burst forth in all its majestic fury and instantly thousands, aye millions of men left their workshops and their stores, and from the peaceful pursuits which they had become accustomed to follow, they become men of iron and determination. The Streets of Philadelphia presented a thrilling scene, old men and young lads, the newly married youth, and the father of many children, all rushed eagerly to the Old State House to learn what fiend led on the cabal who dared to desecrate the flag of American nationality, and as each telegram came sorrowfully though hastily along the lines and informed the multitude of the sad deep disgrace, the immense throng became almost ungovernable, flags were displayed by all true Union loving people, and this seemed only to add fuel to the flames, the streets were jammed, every person suspected of being colleagued with the traitor, were compelled to show their colors, and many sneaking, and infamous cowards, who did not dare to speak their sentiments, and too timid to go south to aid their own hell bent cause found relief beneath the dear old flag, they would have sneakingly desecrated. After a long Saturday night, Sunday came at last, and with it came the sad intelligence that Fort Sumpter had fallen. On Monday the 15th the President's Proclamation was issued, and the danger having been seen, the alarm was sounded and true men joined themselves in bands to subvert the deadly plans of the Rebels and Traitors, without detracting from the merits of millions of noble men who were in arms, and eager for the fray, we must mention those who left our glorious State of Pennsylvania, and it is with pride that we chronicle the fact that Gov. Curtin accepted the numbering some five hundred men, and ordered them to report to Washington without delay. The incidents of their passage through Baltimore the true Pennsylvania German style of Shenagan, from one depot to the other, and their arrival in Washington has been brilliantly and happily portrayed and will be ever held in remembrance by their generous Countrymen. On the evening of the 18th of April, details consisting of twelve companies of the Washington Brigade ununiformed and unarmed, left the City with the 6th Regt. Massachusetts, Vols. Upon their arrival in Baltimore, a fight occurred when the Massachusetts, Regt., with a portion of the Washington Brigade, went on to Washington, and the balance of the Philadelphia Regiments returned to Philadelphia to re-organize. The various military companies throughout the State instantly tendered their services to the Governor under the President's call for 75,000 men, and in two weeks twenty-five regiments were formed but the stringent orders of the Secretary of war, owing to the failure of the Washington Guards, no men were allowed to leave the States in which they were organized, until they were fully uniformed. In a short time however the 25 Regts. departed, and four more Philadelphia Regts. were ready the 26th, 27th, 28th and 29th which however were accepted for three years or the war. The Legislature having been convened by the Governor, for the purpose of arming the State and creating a loan, immediately passed an Act authorizing the organization of 15 Regts. to be known as the Penna. Vol. Reserve Corps, and also authorizing a loan of $3,000,000 to provide for them; these men were speedily raised and at this particular junction the old and revered Society of Cincinnati tendered a donation of $500 to be appropriated to purchase flags for the Penna. Regts. to be by them carried in the field, and when the service was performed and peace restored, to return them to be placed among the archives of the State and the Legislature passed the following joint resolution:

Relative to the procuring of Standards for the several Regiments of Pennsylvania called or to be called into the Service of the United States.

SEC. 1. Resolved by the Senate of the House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly met, That the governor of the commonwealth be requested to ascertain how the several regiments raised in Pennsylvania during the war of the revolution, and the war of 1812, and the war with Mexico, were numbered, among what divisions of the service they were distributed, and were the said regiments distinguished themselves in action. That having ascertained the particulars aforesaid he shall procure regimental standards, to be inscribed with the numbers of those regiments respectively, on which shall be painted the arms of this commonwealth, and the names of the actions in which the said regiments distinguished themselves. That the standards so inscribed shall be delivered to the regiments now in the field or forming, bearing the regimental numbers corresponding to the regiments of Pennsylvania in former wars.

Sec. 2. That the governor do procure regimental standards for all the regiments formed or to be formed in Pennsylvania, beyond the numbers in former wars, upon which shall be inscribed the number of the regiment, and painted the arms of this commonwealth; and that all these standards, after the present, unhappy rebellion is ended, shall be returned to the adjutant general of the state, to be further inscribed, as the valor and good conduct of each particular regiment may have deserved; and that they then be carefully preserved by the state, to be delivered to such future regiments as the military necessities of the country may require Pennsylvania to raise.

ELISHA W. DAVIS,

Speaker of the House of Representatives.

LOUIS W. HALL,

Speaker of the Senate.

APPROVED—The Sixteenth day of May, Anno Domini, one thousand eight hundred and sixty one. A. G. CURTIN.

Nor were the ladies during this time idle, thousands of Regiments from other states, constantly arriving in our city, and the transportation of so many men being so unusual, the Government could not make provision to feed them. Men weary and hungry were thankful for a glass of water, but from the poor milk woman who gave all her milk away to the Ohio Boys, to the sewing women of Mary Street Southwark, who gave her, Coffee, Pork and Beans to the 14th Brooklyn, all were anxious to feed the gallant defenders. System was required, and on the 27th day of May, the women of Southwark, began the task of establishing the Union, and the Cooper Shop Refreshment Saloons, which to the honor of Philadelphia, never closed until the war had ended.

The Citizens Volunteer Hospital, and the Soldiers' Home are the monuments of the devotedness to the Union cause of the People of Philadelphia.

When on the 27th day of July the intelligence arrived that our arms had met with reverses at the battle Bull Run the 15 Regts. of Penna. Reserves were instantly forwarded to Washington, and saved the nation of the disgrace of having Washington in the hands of the Rebels, and now after hard fought battles the hero of Gettysburg, which battle saved the nation's life, returns the dear old flags to the Governor who presented them. May they ever remain among the archives of the State, and palsied be the hand that would desecrate them.

Sung by the thirty-four Misses at the Flag raising at the Volunteer Refreshment Saloon, on Thursday evening, June 27th, 1861.

AIR.—Gay and happy

Come young ladies swell the Chorus,
Let your voices fill the air;
For our Flag floats proudly o'er us,
The Stripes and Stars are waving there.

So let the South jog along as it will,
We are for the Union still;
We're for the Union, we're for the Union,
We are for the Union still.

Our Union must not be divided,
For every freeman takes a pride.
In the Flag that's been derided
By the flood of treason's tide.
So let the South jog, &c.

Our fathers framed the Constitution.
We are pledged to keep it pure;
And maintain from dissolution,
Our Union which must long endure.
So let the South jog, &c

God is with the right forever,
He protected Washington,
Trust in him and he will never
Fail when victory must be won.
So let the South jog, &c
